

The climate of the New England States is remarkably dry when compared with Germany, and most parts of Europe. Many differences, arising from this cause, are noticed by foreign artisans when they settle in Massachusetts. Here, painters can finish their work in a much shorter time; cabinet-makers use much thicker glue; watch-makers use animal instead of vegetable oil; European furniture, when imported, does not wear well; stimulants are much more exciting to the physical system.—Foreigners lose flesh, and become habitually thin; the nerves are stimulated.—All nations living in a dry air tend to a thinness of flesh; in a moist air, to corpulence. This must necessarily have a strong influence upon the descendants of English cattle, when bred here, as we find it has.—[Exchange.]

NEW PATENT FOR MAKING NAILS.—There has recently been invented and put into practical operation in this city, a new machine for making cut nails, the great peculiarity of which is that it is self-feeding, and will manufacture in a given time nearly, if not quite as many again nails as any other known process, and that one man, (as it is claimed,) with the assistance of a boy, will operate ten machines. There is also a great saving in iron, there being a waste of only about a quarter of an inch in 10 feet, which is the length of the sizes of iron placed in the machine at one time. It has been shown that one machine will manufacture from 300 to 350 nails per minute, all of which are perfect in form and finish. The cost of the machine is $250. The inventors are Wm. Fitzpatrick and Joseph Her, two practical nailers, for many years in the employ of the Albany Iron and Nail Works Company, in this city. A patent has been secured for the United States, and measures been taken to obtain a patent in Great Britain and the Canadas.—[Troy Whig.]

This is given as a personal description of the Czar:

"He is taller by a head than most of his courtiers, while the outline of his form is perfect. He is robust and muscular. The head though somewhat too small in proportion to the rest of his body, is still in keeping with his broad chest. The usual expression of his face would suit a statue. A fixed severity and consciousness of majesty are the predominant characteristics. This expression certainly sometimes assumes a more friendly aspect; but it does not appear in the eye, which seldom beams kindly, while the mouth never smiles. The latter feature, indeed, is regularly formed, but the sharp, thin lips indicate austerity and harshness. No sensuality is observable there, nor in any part of the lower face; neither do those lips tell that they have been used to give utterance to words of mildness, while the corners of the mouth betray too plainly contempt of men, and a reserve that never spoke a word in the fullness of confidence. The overhanging eyelashes lend to his physique something lurking, even in simple conversation. When angry, his eyes glare terribly; but they have no brightness for softer emotions. The finely chiselled nose runs straight down from the high forehead, denoting, according to physiognomists, an incapacity for self-denial."

THE SIXTH COMMANDMENT.—A capital point was made by one of the counsel for the prosecution at the trial of Matt. Ward, in answer to Tom Marshall's allusion to Matt. Ward's travels and his visit to Mount Sinai, where God delivered the law to Moses. The counsel wondered if the prisoner, when amidst the sublimities of Sinai, where he indulged in a profusion of sacred sentiments, had ever read in the Decalogue, "Thou shalt not kill!"

We bought a few days ago a paper of genuine Havana smoking tobacco. The outside wrapper looked as old and Spanish as possible—the inside wrapper was a piece of the N. Y. Tribune of a very recent date.—Success to home manufactures.—[Madison Democrat.]

St. Paul, Minnesota, has now 706 houses and 4,700 inhabitants. It began to be a village in 1848.

ANOTHER NEW STATE.—A bill to provide for the admission of Oregon into the Union as a State, has already been reported in the U. S. House of Representatives, and the legislature of Oregon has taken the preliminary steps towards calling a convention to form a constitution. This is looking to the admission of Oregon as a State in 1855, by which time it is presumed there will be the requisite amount of population in the territory to entitle it to the new honors to which it is now aspiring. The Oregonians are thus calculating upon a rapid growth by accessions of population from the Atlantic States, which may not be fulfilled. The emigration overland this season does not appear to be very large—in fact, Nebraska absorbs the attention of emigrants. When the census of 1850 was taken the population of Oregon was 13,294. A territorial census recently taken shows it to have a population amounting to over 40,000, or an increase of nearly 27,000 in three years, or about 148 per cent. This is in the ratio of about 46 per centum per annum, which would be entirely inadequate to swell the aggregate of population to over 90,000 in a single year. However, we presume the Oregonians think there is nothing to be lost by agitating the subject, and perhaps they think also that as the admission of a new State is always delayed unnecessarily, they will have their delay beforehand.
